FIRE DOOR THEATRE

April 2022 Update

Get your tickets to our new production "Quarantine", and see what we're cooking up for the remainder of the year.

QUARANTINE - Tickets live now, and call for Producer

Quarantine, written by our old Firedoorian Brian Quinn, is a 35-min comedy about the hiccups of being isolated at home with your partner during Covid times. The lockdown will really try Terri and Adrien's relationship, up to the point where they even get to talk to the dead.

This original piece will be on as part of the Gay Theatre Festival, from 2nd to 9th of May in the Teacher's Club. Get your tickets early to avoid disappointment! It's a double bill, and you can book them here.

We still need a producer for the show. If you are great at organising and making things happen, or know someone who could fit the bill, email us at firedoortheatre@gmail.com

Uncut 2022 - Rescheduled for June

As you may know, only one day before show-time we had to cancel our Firedoor Uncut –our yearly showcase of short original plays– which was scheduled this past month of March in the Teachers Club.

The good news is that we are not over and done with the Uncut yet -we are in talks with the venue to reschedule the show for this coming June. Keep your eyes peeled for an update on the new dates, soon to be announced! We will release them in the next newsletter and in our social media channels.

Big production of 2022 - "Rabbit Hole"

We are pleased to announce that "Rabbit Hole", by David Lindsay-Abaire, has been chosen for our big production of this year. Dates are not set in stone yet, but we are looking at November.

Eight months after the accidental death of their 4-year-old son, Howie and Becca are trying to overcome their grief. He wants to hold on to everything that reminds him of Danny, while she would rather sell their home and make a fresh start. Cracks begin to appear in the relationship as Howie bonds with a member of his therapy group and Becca reaches out to a teenage boy with telling facial scars.

If you are interested in getting involved in some capacity, drop us an email at firedoortheatre@gmail.com

Workshops postponed until September

With the prep for "Quarantine" and the Uncut likely to happen in June, we have decided to focus on these productions and resume our onsite workshops after the summer break.

But fear not, because there will be still online readings and other sessions that you'd be able to attend in the meantime. As usual, they will be announced on our website and social media channels.

And last but not least, we would like your opinion: What kind of skills would you like to learn in our future workshops? What facilitators would you like to see? We will post a poll very soon on our Facebook page but, in the meantime, you can send us your feedback to firedoortheatre@gmail.com

So long, and thanks for your support
